

Born Biracial: How One Mother Took on Race in America

by Susan Graham, founder Project RACE

MEDIA KIT

Reviewers email:
Kathleen@KathleenKaiser.com
to receive an ebook for review

The Woman Who Gave Birth to a National Civil Rights Movement

Written by Project RACE founder Susan Graham, the book tells her journey of advocating for her own children and millions of biracial and multiracial children like them. Her sometimes turbulent personal story will make you cheer for the underdog in her battles against the federal, state and local governments and other minority organizations.

Born Biracial: How One Mother Took on Race in America is the true story of how Susan brought an invisible population to the forefront and began the multiracial movement. Susan doesn't sugar-coat anything—her personal life suffered, the emotional story of her marriage to a CNN news anchor, being a mother to biracial children, divorce, and remarriage—are all interwoven in her life's story.

Susan Graham is the White mother of two biracial children whose father is Black. Enjoy her triumphs and disappointments including when she and her young son Ryan testified in Washington, DC and in many states to make the dreams of multiracial identity come true. This is the one story every interracial family should read.

Learn more at: BornBiracialBook.com

Early praise for the book:

"I urge everyone to read this book!" — Rod Carew, Baseball Hall of Fame

"Born Biracial is a long time coming; this is the lifetime work of Susan Graham. She has been a leader shaking up America by changing the laws that failed to be inclusive of biracial/multiracial children. In this book you will see the rush in Susan's heart as she made the path to ensure that all biracial people can self-identify. Excellent read!" — Sharyn Dones-Bergin, Attorney and Advocate

"Parents, Minority Organizations, Multicultural Organizations, and Educational Institutions should all own a copy of Born Biracial: How One Mother Took on Race in America."

— Cherrye S. Vasquez, Ph.D., Educator, Author, Blogger

"Born Biracial is an important primer about one mother's efforts to change public policy to ensure inclusion of biracial and multiracial children."

— Alice Robbin, Ph.D., Associate Professor Emerita, Indiana University

Author Bio

Susan Graham is the founder, president, and executive director of Project RACE (Reclassify All Children Equally). Specializing in race/ethnicity and public policy she is an advocate for civil rights who has testified before congressional committees in Washington. In addition to her work with Project RACE, Susan has been published in The New York Times, The Atlanta Journal-Constitution, The Orlando Sentinel and in other major newspapers and magazines, and is a frequent expert guest on radio and TV. She is married to Portuguese-American poet Sam Pereira.

FACTS ABOUT:

Born Biracial: How One Mother Took on Race in America.

Author: Susan Graham

Publisher: Memories Press

Release Date: May 2019

ISBN: 978-1-7339088-2-5 Paperback edition

978-1-7339088-1-8 Hardcover edition

978-1-7339088-0-1 Digital edition

Page Count: 239 pages